The old Mayor thought that some new ar angement must be made in street no-It has been suggested that menciature. It has been suggested that the Post Office authorities would have a fine puzzle to solve, with a letter insufficiently directed to "John Jones. No. 19 Third. Greater New York." Now, in Brooklyn there is a Third street, a North Third and a South Third street, a Third place and a Third avenue. In this city there is Third street and Third avenue. There is small danger of any such dilemma, as several men who have thought over the matter testify.

STRANAHAN'S HAPPINESS.

James S. T. Stranahan: With the signature of the Governor affixed to the Greater New York bill I feel that my mission in life is ended. This is a culmination that has been the dream of my life. Words cannot express my elation. Since learning of the great triumph of the consolidationists I have felt more vigorous than I have for months; so much so that to-day I took a drive for several hours without feeling at all fatigued. Yes, I would accept an appointment on the Greater New York Commission, al-though I do not want to appear selfish.

WURSTER PLANS FOR UNION.

Frederick W. Wurster: It is difficult t say anything definite regarding the improvements likely to be made in Greater New York until some kind of a report has been handed in by the Commiss which is to be appointed. The City Hall will, of course, be in what is now New York. The present City Hall of the City of Churches ought, in my opinion, to be converted into a public library. As far as the duplication in the names of the streets in the two cities is concerned, any difficulty caused by that could be easily removed by adopting the system employed in London or Washington. Then, again, the territory could be divided in this wise when the names were identical: Brooklyn division. Staten Island division and New made will be decided upon as soon as the Commission submits its report.

A POSTMASTER'S IDEAS.

Andrew T. Sullivan, Postmaster of Brook-lyn: The names and numbers of the streets will have to be adjusted when Brooklyn and New York merge into the Brooklyn and New York merge into the Greater New York. There are about 900 atreets whose nomenciature is identical in the two cities, so it would at once be necessary for the City Works Department to adopt some such system as is used in Washington, or to divide the Greater New York into sections, to be respectively known as the Brooklyn division, Staten Island division, Long Island division, and New York division. In this way, for instance, Third street or Third avenue, in New York and Brooklyn would not be confounded. I anticipate no trouble in the confounded. I anticipate no trouble in the Post Office Department. Everything will easily adjust itself, providing the munici-pal authorities do as I have suggested.

LOYAL LEAGUE GIVES IT UP.

W. C. Redfield, president of the Loyal League: The Loyal League has been defeated and we will have to make the most of it. No, I do not know of any intention to contest the constitutionality of the bill

ORR NOT AVAILABLE.

ber of Commerce: I have seen my name mentioned as a possible commissioner under the Greater New York bill, but you may say from me that I do not consider myself eligible for appointment. I am already a State officer, and I understand that I cannot hold two offices under the State. On October 1, when I was in Europe, Governor Morton appointed me manager of the State hospitals and asylums of Long Island, which are sit-uated at Kings Park and Flatbush. As regards the renaming of streets and all the other questions which may arise, I am of opinion that the Governor will appoint gentlemen thoroughly competent to decide cially as regards Staten Island, which is entirely foreign in its interests to the city of New York and requires a government of an entirely different character. I think, too, that there is danger in having so great a political power in the hands which in the course of very few years will dominate the entire politics and legislature of the State, because the political lenders in the city will elect a majority of the entire Assembly. In forming a Code for the new city, I think the old geographical and political boundaries would have to be respected and different systems of gov-ernment and of taxation be established for different sections; as is now the case in the different wards of Brooklyn. It would be unfair to subject all parts to the same taxation. We should have to adopt the same street system as is now in use in London, where there are twenty-four George streets and eighteen Hanover streets, each of which is distinguished by adding some local peculiarity, such as Hanover street, Grosvenor square, or George street, E. C. In the very near future there will be another large city, really a part of our great metropolis, on the west side of the Hudson, which will include Jersey City, Hoboken, Greenville, Bayonne, Bloomfield, Orange, Newark, etc., the population of which is already approaching a million inhabitants, and which will necessarily be under a different government to that of New York on ac-count of State division. The great advan-tage that our grand American city will have over others, is that it will have two great rivers, the East River and the Hud-son, running right through it, and taking in place of big parks, while being most useful for commerce. For health and sa-lubrity this great city will have the advantage over any other capital of the
